

Slanderer among themselves?

The following article speaks for itself. I asked Mr. Schulz, editor in chief, to add one correction and one clarification to the slanderous article by John Rosenthal, but of no avail.

Germany's Terror Apologist

Dear Mr. Schulz,

on January 20th, 2007 I send the following e-mail again:

on January 17th, 2007 I send you the following reply to Lars Rensmann appearance to my reply to the inflammatory article by John Rosenthal on your website:

Dear Mr. Schulz,

please could you publish my following reply to Mr. Rensmann's claim:

"Two false allegations in Lars Rensmann's book "Demokratie und Judenbild" against me were blacken in almost 60 university libraries in Germany, Austria and Switzerland. The list reads like the Who is Who of libraries. I did not object that the publisher sells the remainder stock."

Please could you answer when this will be posted on your website? If I do not get an answer till January 22nd, 2007 I shall present my e-mail-correspondence on my own website.

Already on Dezember 11th, 2006 I send you the following message asking you to post the following clarification under the slanderous article by John Rosenthal. Up till now (January, 20th, 2007) of no avail!

Dear Mr. Schulz,

please could you add the following text to the inflammatory article by John Rosenthal "Germany's Terror Apologist" on your website from February 23rd, 2006:

Already at that time of publication I figured that this article was not written by John Rosenthal himself but rather by someone else in Germany, perhaps Matthias Kuentzel. The deep insights in the obscure "anti-German" discussions and obsessions and the rhetoric agitation against critics of the Israeli occupation policy used in the Rosenthal article hinted at its German origin or "spin doctor". The following incidence gives me some hints who could have been the real author of the Rosenthal article. His slanderous terminology fits perhaps the author of the following article.

Guess who translated it: John Rosenthal

What contingency?
